CELEBRATING 90 YEARS

coach, professor, author and entrepreneur

DEAR ALUMNI,

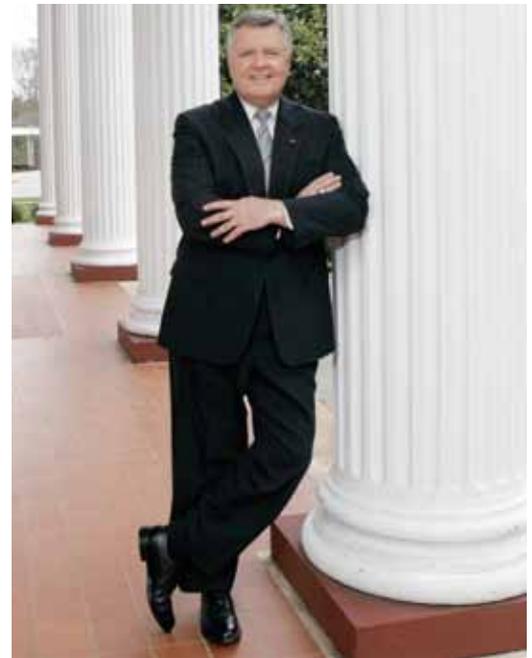

Fall is full of fresh starts at Jacksonville State University. It is the time of a new school year, a new football season, and a new transit system; even nature rustles with anticipation as leaves change to brilliant yellows and reds.

We look forward to seeing our alumni fill the seats of a stadium-in-progress this fall, but are especially excited about Homecoming on October 24. A full schedule for this day can be found on page 25.

It was the love of football that led Don Salls to Alabama, and later to a great coaching career at JSU. Coach Salls celebrated many wins on the field, and he was recently honored at a gathering off the field, commemorating his 90th birthday. Read about his life and work on page 32.

The life of another iconic member of the JSU staff can be read about on page 15. Joe Serviss, recently retired vice president of institutional advancement, began his time at JSU, and love for the university, in 1964 as a student. Passionate about advancing education and the surrounding community, Serviss taught and worked at JSU for more than twenty years.

On page 58, you can read about the renovations occurring at the Victoria Inn. While many of the updates are found in the hotel rooms, the others are taking place in the university classrooms. This article will share how JSU's partnership with the Victoria is benefiting the university and its students.

Another new, visible addition to the campus and the community is the introduction of three bus lines known as the Gamecock Express. These routes, identified by color, serve students, faculty, staff, and the community at no charge. To read more about how to make your next trip around campus safer and greener, go to page 12.

I hope you enjoy this issue, and I look forward to seeing you back on campus this fall!

Sincerely,

William A. Meehan, Ed.D.

 JSU alumnus pedals a path to a cleaner city

AS A RECENT GRADUATE FROM JACKSONVILLE STATE UNIVERSITY, SCOTT EDMISTON ('86) SAT WITH OTHER FRESH ALUMNI ON A WARM SUMMER DAY IN 1988 AT THE OLD RED ROOSTER PUB AND PACKAGE LOCATED OFF THE SQUARE. THE GROUP CONVERSED ABOUT LIFE AND BETTER LIVING OPPORTUNITIES IN JACKSONVILLE OVER A FEW DRINKS.

ALUMNI

“As the story goes,” says Edmiston, “By the first pitcher, we determined somebody needed to open up a bike shop in Jacksonville—and by the second pitcher we determined it needed to be me.”

Scott’s Bikes was open for business. Since then, he has sold and worked on bikes for many community members, professors of the university, alumni coming back to visit and even band members who come through town to play. Edmiston remembers selling a bike to a member of Drivin’ N’ Cryin’ while the band was on a tour stop in Jacksonville during his first year of business.

Although Edmiston’s degrees are in computer science and economics, he says he uses the knowledge he gained at JSU to generate his business and create products good for people and good for the world in which they live.

“I’ve always been a problem solver,” says Edmiston. “Being a good programmer is not much different than being a good mechanic.”

Edmiston grew up working in a bike shop at the age of 16 in Indianapolis. Today, he is on a list of top mechanics in the Southeast. Working on bikes for most of his life and traveling to the world’s largest bike convention every year, he has a personal goal of being the best-educated bike mechanic.

Edmiston says his passion is to make Jacksonville a more bicycle-centric city. He truly believes in a local beginning to a larger change to improve the quality of life. He has seen and experienced two-wheel transportation as a solution to several problems for a long time.

Not alone in his thinking, in 1993, Professor John Whitelegg found that one single-occupant car requires 20 times the amount of urban space as a cyclist. And a 1996 Journey Times survey in London reported, for a journey within Central London, the average time by car was 33 minutes; whereas the average time by bike was 18 minutes.

Under the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century, the U.S. set aside $3 billion for bicycle and pedestrian projects between 1998 and 2003. In the current global economy, nations worldwide are investigating initiatives to fight fuel costs and petroleum pollution. According to Janet Larsen of the Earth Policy Institute in 2002, some of the world’s top countries are developing plans and issuing funds to generate use of two wheels over four.

Located on our very own square in Jacksonville, Scott’s Bikes has seen and served the need for two-wheel transportation in Jacksonville for nearly 20 years. Whether riding a $3,000 road bike or a $100 retro reinvention, Edmiston supports and promotes getting around town on two wheels.

This mechanic also works on bikes to give away to children every Christmas through the Jacksonville Christian Outreach Center (JCOC). This is one reason why he will accept most any bike that people’s kids outgrow and they find is collecting dust in the garage. To date, Edmiston has donated almost 200 bikes to the JCOC.

Edmiston works to create and repair every bike to fit the needs of its owner, and when he is not repairing, he is riding. On the Chief Ladiga Advisory Board, Edmiston was thrilled when the 17-year rails to trails project came to fruition. Now that we have a scenic trail running directly through campus and connecting with the Silver Comet in Georgia, cycling is more accessible and hopping on the trail is a good start.

But for Edmiston, two-wheel transportation is not just for leisure, it’s for life. If you ask him to provide one tip for life, he will simply say, “Ride your bike.” You have probably even seen him around town. Edmiston rides anywhere he needs to go and uses a motorcycle (another set of two wheels) for longer trips. If you need to make a trip to the grocery store, Edmiston says baskets and small coolers can easily be outfitted to your bike.

Almost exclusively on two wheels, Edmiston does not even own a licensed four-wheel vehicle. He doesn’t just talk the talk. He rides the ride. 🚲

MY FILIPINO SUMMER

BY BETHANY HARBISON

THE PLANE CIRCLED AND SWOOPED AND, FACE PRESSED AGAINST THE WINDOW, I STARED AT THE WORLD BELOW ME. THE ISLANDS SPARKLED LIKE EMERALDS. THE WATER REFLECTED A DEEP BLUE. BUT AS THE AIRCRAFT DIPPED LOWER, THE COLORS OF PARADISE GREW DIM, AND REALITY SET IN LIKE A ROCK IN MY STOMACH. EXPANSES OF SHANTY TOWNS STRETCHED BELOW ME, AND MANILA'S SMOG HUNG THICK IN THE AIR.

I WAS A LONG, LONG, LONG WAY FROM HOME.

Several months prior, from the comfort of my Jacksonville State University dorm room, I applied to be a summer missionary with Nehemiah Teams, an organization that mobilizes and sends college students on 52-day missions that involve them in pursuits such as planting churches, working in orphanages, tilling fields and building homes.

Six flights and one 13-hour ride in the belly of a ferry stood between my home in Holly Pond, Alabama, and my team's final destination – Dapitan City, a coastal town on western Mindanao, Philippines. Our motley crew was composed of three Filipinos, one Korean, three Mississippians, and me, a small-town Alabama girl. Our task was to make friends, teach Bible studies, and, Lord willing, plant a church.

I'll never forget my first day in Dapitan — my back ached from the weight of my pack, my head hurt from trying to converse with my international teammates, my belongings reeked from being soaked in a rainstorm during orientation, and I was tired down deep in my bones. We set up our tents under a pavilion and fell asleep to the sounds of grunting pigs and bad karaoke.

Screaming, squawking roosters declared morning at 5 a.m. My teammate, Margaret, and I gathered our plastic buckets and toiletries and set off in search of the “comfort room” or “CR”— a term used for Filipino bathrooms that, oddly enough, often are not comfortable at all. Ours was a tiny space containing a spigot and a low, lidless toilet bowl. We filled our buckets and bathed outside, fully clothed.

I formed lifelong friendships with people I may never see again but could never forget. I played Red Rover in the middle of the street with dozens of children. I worshipped God in Cebuano, their native tongue.

I saw the gospel of Jesus Christ fill

As the days and weeks of the summer melted away, God continued to surprise me. —BETHANY HARBISON

At the sound of muffled laughter, I looked up to see a beautiful little girl peering around the corner at us. By the time we scrubbed ourselves clean — well, cleaner — one, two, three, four, five, six children had appeared, all watching with shy smiles.

In voices sweet with innocence, they practiced their English on us, and we tried our newly acquired Cebuano words on them. That sunshiny morning, as we sat befriending those children, I began to feel at home. And later that same day, when I learned of a neighboring family's willingness to give up their home for the summer so that we would have a place to stay, I was in awe of God's provision.

As the days and weeks of the summer melted away, God continued to surprise me.

That summer, I taught the stories of the Samaritan woman, Nicodemus, Jesus' baptism, Philip and the eunuch, the feeding of the five thousand, and the Crucifixion over and over until my voice grew hoarse.

people's hearts with hope and change their lives. I watched from a beach littered with coconut shells as new believers were baptized in the ocean blue.

I knelt on a bamboo floor, holding the hand of a dying man and praying aloud for him. Days later, I found myself standing by his casket, looking out into the crowd who had gathered for his funeral, and sharing with them the good news about God's mercy and grace.

It was in that town, with those warm-hearted people who stole my heart, that God opened my eyes to the enormity of the world and the need throughout it. This was the summer I know I will look back on for the rest of my days and know it was then God wiped away my worldly ambition and began filling that clean slate with plans of His own.

These were the 52 days that changed my life. ☺

In just 52 days, Nehemiah led his people to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, restore a nation, and revive a people. It was a short-term project that had eternal results. In the same way, Nehemiah Teams, a missions organization in the Pacific Rim, is leading the next generation to reach every nation for Christ ... standing in the gap among the unreached and hard to reach. Nehemiah Teams offers short-term mission projects that have eternal results.

Nehemiah Teams was started by two JSU grads, whose names are withheld for security reasons, and is now in eight different countries, serving countless groups. Students can choose to help reach the lost by serving on evangelism and church-planting teams, help the poor by taking on tasks like building houses or planting trees, love the abandoned by working in an orphanage, or tell the missions story by serving on a media team. Visit www.nehemiahteam.com for more information.

JSU ROTC SCHOLARSHIP ENDOWMENT STORY BY CLIFF LANHAM'62 / EDITED BY ERIN CHUPP

In a bold and strategic move in January 2009, the JSU ROTC Alumni Chapter mapped out a long term scholarship program for the future of the ROTC Department at JSU.

The scholarship committee of the ROTC Alumni Chapter has found that more and more ROTC graduates are looking for ways to contribute to the ROTC department because of the wonderful experiences they had while at JSU. Fortunately, we have a number of dedicated individuals and organizations continuing in the short term annual program to provide scholarships. Coupled with the generous support of the university that has been matching these annual donations, the alumni chapter has been able to support 10 to 15 cadets with small scholarships for the next three years.

In January 2009, the chapter established the formation of the ROTC Scholarship Endowment in concert with the university. To ensure a viable scholarship program, the endowment must accumulate $25,000 by 2012. As of now, the endowment has nearly $7000 and some $3000 pledged

If each graduate of the ROTC program donated just $100.00 this endowment could have a generous balance of more than $150,000 in short order!

The ROTC Alumni Chapter is seeking any and all graduates who would like to participate in the endowment and or the present annual matching scholarship program. As with other donations to the university, these donations are tax deductible. Donations should be sent to:

JSU Foundation, Inc.
700 Pelham Rd North
Jacksonville, AL 36265

Please make checks payable to JSU Foundation, Inc. A small note or information in the description line of the check should list the name of the scholarship fund to which your donation will be credited. For further information concerning the JSU ROTC Scholarship programs, please contact Therman Greene, Col. (ret) at trgreene@aol.com.

toward the fund. Considering the nation's economic condition, the chapter is very pleased with the results so far! It is the goal of the chapter to start using this fund in the year 2015 for cadets who need assistance while attending JSU. In order to reach this goal and support these cadets, we need to raise a minimum of $15,000 in the following two years.

But when is shooting for the minimum a part of a proposed plan of a JSU initiative? JSU has commissioned some 1500 cadets since 1950.

newly created office of marketing and communications

BY ERIN CHUPP

SHARP, ENGAGING AND ON THE MOVE, with a desire and a drive to reach, teach and keep students and alumni, Jacksonville State University has recently created the administrative Office of Marketing and Communications. After nearly a year of planning, an enhanced and exciting new JSU web site with an actively updated public relations link went live on May 18.

“Not only can our site visitors read articles about JSU now, they can comment on the articles, submit their blogs for inclusion on our site, and even subscribe to automatic updates that go straight to their computers and cell phones via RSS,” says Public Relations Specialist Angie Finley. “We’re very happy with this new direction and we encourage everyone with an interest in the university—especially our alumni—to take advantage of all the new features on the site.”

Finley notes, “There was a time when neighbors would meet at the fence to exchange information and hear the latest news.” She says the new role of the Office of Marketing and Communications is to serve as the university’s fence to bring the community together. Perhaps good fences can make good neighbors.

The tools and trades of building a modern fence go far beyond press releases by fax machines and FedEx. JSU now has an official Facebook fan page and Twitter feed (JSUNews), as well as a Flickr photostream. MySpace, iTunesU and YouTube Edu are also in development. This language is the new lingo at the fence, and JSU is now working to stay fluent and connected. Finley describes the move as one from the old “news bureau” days to becoming a catalyst for building community.

With a growing campus community, our new office is working to promote effective dialogue by the fence posts. Because we have “tweeted” on Twitter, prospective students subscribing to our feed have asked about programs and a future at JSU. And media outlets have visited our fence asking for stories from something they saw in our ongoing collection of online postings and articles.

Director of Public Relations, Patty Hobbs, says she is also looking to focus on internal communication at JSU. “We are striving to get students, faculty and staff more involved in campus events and activities,” says Hobbs. “A JSU alumna myself, it is great to be back home to further develop and share news about a community that has played such a large part in my life—to expand the fence and invite more people to it.”

“Today, our mission is more than reporting the good news about Jacksonville State externally,” says Hobbs. “On a campus that is growing rapidly in the midst of a global community, where information is exchanged at the high speed of the Internet, we are seeking to supplement external news distribution by providing the JSU community a place to connect and participate in the fast flow of information.”

Where news was once static it is now a slideshow. The new public relations web site (easily accessed at www.jsunews.com) is reader-friendly, and retrieving articles, whether current or from the archives, is simpler than ever.

This facelift would not be unified or striking without the creative minds now sitting at the desks in the marketing office of Bibb Graves. Directed by Tim Garner, who owned a marketing company in the Atlanta area and oversaw several successful large-scale campaigns after graduating from JSU, the promotion and marketing of JSU has a new look and style.

Hopefully the new logo is becoming more visible and familiar to you. Also be on the lookout for marketing tools such as a 30-second TV spot, titled “Where You’re Going,” advancing the image of JSU to its many audiences.

So where are you going right now? We would love to meet you at the fence!

a call to come together JSU's annual phonathon

BY ERIN CHUPP

NO GIFT IS TOO SMALL. These words will be a resounding theme during this year's annual Phonathon taking place from September to March. Our callers, current Jacksonville State University students and alumni, will be working to contact alumni, friends, and organizations in support of JSU.

Because state appropriations are extremely low this year, it is important for JSU family and friends to come together to keep the university's rankings up and our students on the front edge of education.

One example of your gifts reaching these goals is the recent addition of new Macintosh computers for a lab in Self Hall. Print journalism students are now using up-to-date software to learn layout and design, and are able to compete in the modern market by studying the art of crafting an active and efficient news Web site. The new equipment also played a minor role in the Department of Communication receiving its accreditation in May of last year by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications. It is now one of only three accredited communication programs in the state of Alabama.

It is our vision that if every one of our alumni pledged to provide a small gift of just twenty-five dollars, large improvements and additions can enter many departments and programs throughout our campus. With more than 45,000 alumni currently on file, this type of donation could provide the university with more than one million dollars to disperse!

"Private giving is more critical now than ever with the challenges facing our economy being greater than ever," says Director of Institutional Development Earl Warren. "Your support is extremely appreciated." 🙌

JSU's new transit system

BY BILL BOYKINS

The University of Alabama has one. So does Auburn University. Now, Jacksonville State University has one too. What's that you ask? It's the Gamecock Express, a transit system that will allow students to leave their cars in park.

For the first time in the history of JSU, students will be able to ride to class, travel to buy groceries and visit their favorite night spots without using a drop of gas. The transit system will transport students, faculty and residents to destinations throughout the university and the city of Jacksonville.

And it's all free!

"Students will be able to travel to class, the library and to venues in the city at no charge," said Joe Whitmore, director of Institutional Support Services at JSU. "The system will be available to residents of Jacksonville as well. Our goal is to help reduce traffic around the university and supply a service for our students and the community."

According to Whitmore, the transit system, funded in part by a Federal Transportation Administration community block grant and the university, will preliminarily consist of 10 transit buses, and will be running regular bus routes in the fall. The routes will begin at the Central Station across from Daugette Hall, travel along Trustee Circle and circle the campus and the city in five to seven minute intervals.

Whitmore says there will be three startup routes: a White Route (covering the west side of the campus); a Red Route (covering the east side of campus); and a Blue Route (covering the city venues). "Later, we will add a central campus route, a weekend route, and a security route," he said.

The buses will leave the Central Station around 7 a.m. and continue to run up to 2 a.m. for certain routes. The buses will stop at all campus locations, such as the Houston Cole Library, the Theron Montgomery Building; the Merrill Building; the Stone Center; and all of the campus dorms and off-campus apartments. More details on bus stops will be announced later.

"Most of the bus stops will be based on student needs," Whitmore said. "But all campus buildings, dorms and off-campus apartments will be served."

WHITE ROUTE: This route will travel along Trustee Circle to Beck Circle. It will then travel along Pelham Road to Mountain Street. It will continue onto Forney Avenue to Park Avenue (near the Coliseum). It will then turn onto the Old Gadsden Highway, making stops near McArthur Street and Millican Street, then returning to Trustee Circle. There will be a total of 17 preliminary stops on this route.

RED ROUTE: This route will circle Trustee Circle to Street Avenue. It will then continue onto Forney Avenue to the Old Gadsden Highway. It will then travel briefly on Pelham Road to Church Avenue, then turn onto Bennett Boulevard. It will then make a series of stops near Houston Cole Library and the Merrill Building. It will then travel to Roebuck Waters Drive and return to the Central Station. There will be a total of 12 preliminary stops on this route.

BLUE ROUTE: This route will circle Trustee Circle before heading to downtown Jacksonville. It will make various stops near Hammett Avenue, and A,B,C and D streets. It will then travel along Alexandria Road to the Jacksonville Highway. The route will continue to James Hopkins Road and Weaver Road, making stops near the National Guard Armory, Jacksonville Hospital and Wal-Mart. It will make stops at various locations on Church Avenue and Gardner Street. The bus will then return to Church Avenue and make stops along Vann Street, Ladiga Street and College Street before returning to Central Station. There will be a total of 22 preliminary stops

dining hall makeover

BY BILL BOYKINS

What do continuous service, food and Jacksonville State University have in common? New dining options that are sure to please the palate.

JSU, in partnership with food service company, Sodexo, will offer several new eateries and a renovated Hopper Dining Hall beginning this fall.

Students and faculty will be able to enjoy a latte or cappuccino at the Jazzman's Café and Coffee Shop at Houston Cole Library, and finger-lickin' good hot wings at the WOW Café and Wingery at the Hopper Dining Hall. Chick-fil-A and Starbucks will remain at the Montgomery Food Court with two new outlets, the Baja Fresh Mexican Grill and the Freshens Smoothie Bar and Energy Zone, to be added at a later date.

According to Joe Whitmore, director of Institutional Support Services, the department overseeing the project, the dining options were designed to create flexibility for students and faculty that include: varied hours of operations; a choice of dining locations; and a meal plan that is both affordable and convenient for everyone. And, dining officials say, it will allow students and faculty to "find the perfect place at the perfect time."

"The benefit for students is that we are moving away from a selective dining option to one that has continuous service," he said. "For example, the Hopper Dining Hall café will be open until midnight, and the Jazzman's Café will parallel library hours." Most of the eateries on campus will be open on the weekends as well, Whitmore said. With that, the buzz over the new dining options has students and faculty excited about the new changes.

A blogger on the Marching Southerners Web site says: "The WOW Café is going to be awesome. I know (Jacksonville) already has an abundance of wing places, but this one is right here on campus, and is priced very nicely. Not to mention the (Jazzman's Café and Coffee shop) in the (Houston Cole) library will ROCK." As for affordability, the meal plan will provide credits for prepaid meals at Hopper Dining Hall in any combination of the all-you-can-eat meals at breakfast, brunch, lunch or dinner. The plan also provides a declining balance account of flex dollars to be used at campus dining facilities, such as Hopper Dining Hall, the Montgomery Food Court, the new WOW Wingery and Café, and the Jazzman's Café and Coffee Shop. Students will also be able to use the credits at future eateries, such as the proposed Freshens Smoothie Bar & Energy Zone and the Baja Fresh Mexican Grill.

According to Whitmore, students who live on campus at JSU will be billed $1,100 for the plan. Students can choose plans from the following options:

joe serviss retires

Serviss actually began his longtime career at Jacksonville State University as a student donning the traditional rat hat, symbolizing freshman status. On a Friday evening in 1964, he graduated from high school, and on the following Sunday he drove to JSU for summer school. He could not wait to get started.

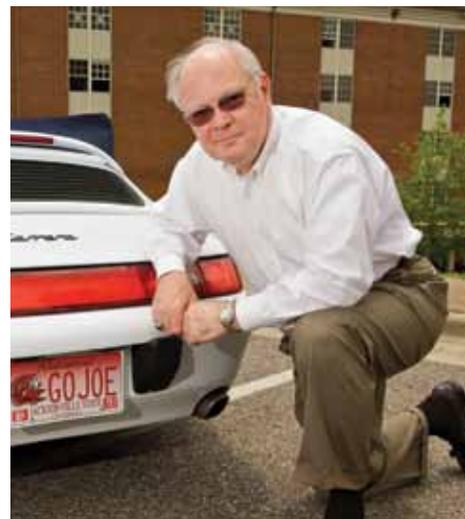

Active on campus all four years of his undergraduate degree, Serviss was a business major. During his freshman year while taking classes full time, Serviss also worked at the student center snack bar, then known as "The Grab," located in Hammond Hall. Soon after, Mr. Opal Lovett hired Serviss to work as a student photographer.

By his junior year, Serviss chose to take the advanced ROTC route and went under contract with the United States Army, and he took classes to be commissioned as 2nd Lt. upon graduation.

He also married Miss Carolyn Harris, '67 of Gadsden, a Marching Ballerina he met in the cafeteria his freshman year. JSU has educated several members of the Serviss family. Besides he and his wife, Serviss' brother, sister, son, sister-in-law, and niece are all JSU graduates.

Serviss retired from the Army in June 1989, at the rank of Lt. Col., after serving the country for a total of twenty years. He was hired as the director of institutional development at JSU two months later, destined for twenty more years of service to his alma mater. His move to vice presidency over the division of institutional advancement came in October of 2002.

Although Serviss is out of the office and no longer wears a suit and tie every day, he and his wife do not have plans to go too far. "Jacksonville is a great university and a super city," he says. "Carolyn and I have always considered it our home and we don't plan on moving."

Jacksonville State University's Ben Tootle was selected by the Minnesota Twins as the 101st overall pick in the 2009 Major League Baseball first-year player draft. Tootle made history by becoming the fourth Gamecock player ever to be drafted in the third round or higher – and the first since Bill White was taken as the 99th overall pick by the Arizona Diamondbacks in 2000. Tootle also had the unique distinction of being the first player from an Alabama college taken in this year's draft. He has a career 19-9 record during his three-year career for the Gamecocks and a 4.83 earned run average. The Oxford, Ala., native made 43 career starts and recorded 225 2/3 innings on the mound with 204 career strikeouts.

The hard-throwing right-hander pitched for Falmouth in the prestigious Cape Cod Baseball League last summer, where he was selected to the All-Star team after posting a 1.97 earned run average in 22 appearances.

Jason Zylstra was selected in the 36th round of the draft and will also be joining the Minnesota Twins. This sophomore, who hails from Sylacauga Ala., was the 21st pick in the round and the 1092nd overall pick in the draft. Zylstra posted a 1-2 record with a 4.55 earned run average with 18 strikeouts. This occasion marks the second time over the last three years that the Gamecocks have had two players drafted in the same season, and the fourth time since 2000.

Minnesota won't be the only town to welcome a Gamecock. JSU's Mitch Miller, a native of Hokes Bluff, Ala., has signed a free-agent contract to pitch for the Milwaukee Brewers. Miller was a four-year letterman for the Gamecocks and led the team with 62 career appearances on the mound. The senior threw 121 1/3 innings during his Gamecock career with 82 strikeouts and seven career saves, while posting a 3-5 career record.

SOFTBALL TOP 25

FRESH OFF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL SEASON IN PROGRAM HISTORY, THE JACKSONVILLE STATE SOFTBALL TEAM EARNED A SPOT IN BOTH FINAL TOP 25 POLLS THIS SEASON, FINISHING 21ST IN THE ESPN.COM/USA SOFTBALL POLL AND 24TH IN THE USA TODAY/NFCA POLL.

The Gamecocks (43-16, 19-2 Ohio Valley Conference) earned the program's first appearance in either poll and joined JSU's football program as the only two of the school's teams to be voted in the Top 25 since moving to Division I in the 1994-95 academic year. It adds to what is already a long list of goals that head coach Jana McGinnis has accomplished in her 16 seasons with the program, a stretch that has now seen her teams win 556 games and five conference titles.

"It is such an honor to be voted as one of the top 25 teams in the country," McGinnis said. "It is something that has been a goal of ours for a long time. This season was special in so many ways, and I am very excited to see the hard work of our girls pay off down the stretch. This is a great reward for not only this year's team, but for the teams that paved the way for us to be where we are today."

JSU finished one spot ahead of North Carolina in the ESPN.com/USA Softball Poll and just ahead of 2008 College World Series participant Louisiana-Lafayette in the USA Today/NFCA Poll. Washington was the consensus No. 1 team in the country, while Florida, Alabama and Georgia occupied the rest of the top four spots in both polls.

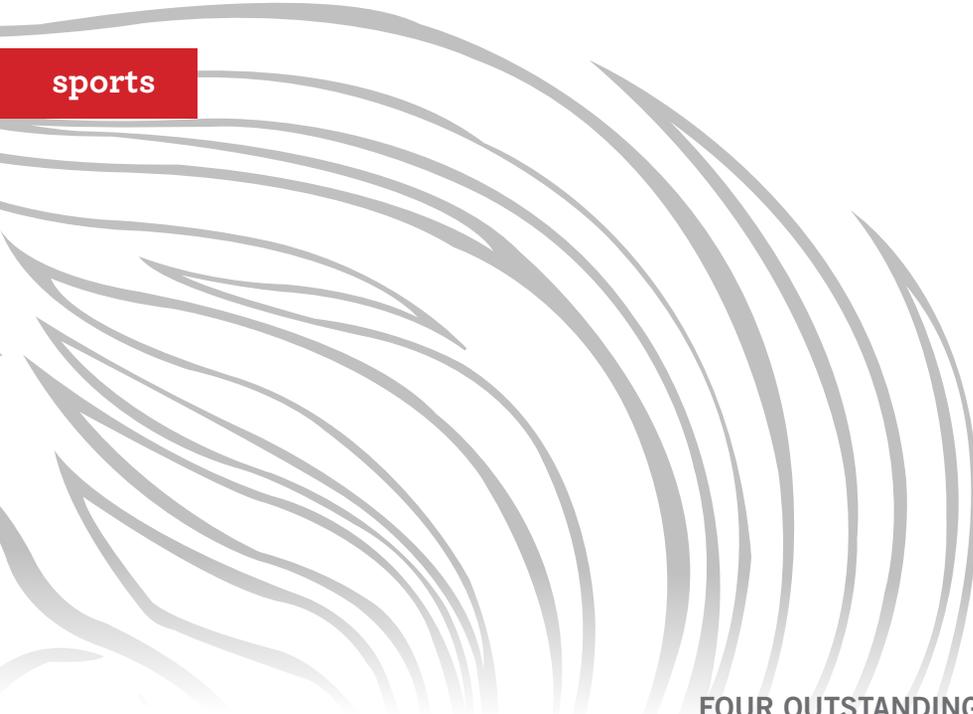

In 2009, the Gamecocks capped their sixth 40-win season in the last seven years with the school's first Division I at-large berth in the NCAA Tournament and went on to win the Knoxville Regional before falling to No. 3 Alabama in the Tuscaloosa Super Regional. Along the way, McGinnis earned her third OVC Coach of the Year honor while guiding a roster that featured nine players that earned All-OVC accolades. Senior Karla Pittman was named the league's Pitcher of the Year and Nikki Prier the OVC Player of the Year to lead four First Team All-OVC selections.

ONLY ONE GOAL COUNTS, WINNING!

 FOUR OUTSTANDING GAMECOCKS TO BE INDUCTED INTO

HALL OF FAME

Two All-Americans, one record-setting basketball player, and the most prolific softball pitcher in Gamecock history comprise the 2008-09 class of the Jacksonville State University Athletic Hall of Fame.

Gary Angel, who led the Gamecocks to four straight conference championships in basketball; Joe Billingsley, a two-time All-America offensive lineman; Ann Shelton, JSU's all-time strikeout leader in softball; and Robert Lee Sanders, JSU's all-time leading scorer in basketball will be formally inducted to JSU's Athletic Hall of Fame on November 20.

Angel became just the fourth player in Jacksonville State basketball history to score 1,000 points after finishing his four-year career with 1,193 points. As a senior, he helped the Gamecocks win four straight Alabama Collegiate Conference Championships while earning All-ACC and All-Alabama honors. He averaged 18.7 points per game to lead Jacksonville State to a 19-5 record and the school's first-ever berth in the NAIA playoffs.

The Jacksonville, Ala., native finished his junior season by scoring 441 points to earn All-ACC honors as the Gamecocks went 15-11. Angel scored 203 points as a sophomore as JSU posted an 18-7 record, and he scored 109 points during his freshman campaign to lead the team to a 16-13 mark.

Joe Billingsley is considered one of the finest offensive linemen to ever play for the Gamecocks. At six feet one inches tall and 290 pounds, Billingsley is a player from Columbus, Miss. He earned first-team All-America honors from the Associated Press and second-team honors from Football News as a sophomore in 1986, before garnering these awards again in 1988.

In his senior year, he anchored an offensive line that paved the way for the Gamecocks' Gulf South Conference leading 264 yards rushing per game including a school-record 661 yards of total offense in an NCAA Division II playoff win over West Chester.

The Gamecocks posted a 10-2 record, won their first Gulf South Conference Championship in six years, and earned a berth into the NCAA Division II playoffs for the first time since 1982, where JSU advanced to the semifinals. Billingsley finished his career by being selected to the Gulf South Conference's "Team of the Decade" for the 1980s.

Robert Lee Sanders is the all-time leading scorer in Gamecock basketball history with 1,983 points during his brilliant four-year career. He was named the Gulf South Conference Player of the Year after scoring a school single-season record 658 points to lead the Gamecocks into the NCAA Elite Eight.

Sanders' name is also on top of the list in several other categories, including Most Field Goals Made with 697, Most Field Goals Attempted with 1,613, Most 3-pointers Attempted with 692, and Most 3-pointers Made with 269. He also set a school record of eighty-two 3-points in one season.

As a junior, he led the Gamecocks to the NCAA Final 4 with a 27-6 record and was named the Most Valuable Player of the District of Columbia Classic, the Tom Roberson Classic, the Gulf South Conference Tournament, and the NCAA South Region playoffs. The All-GSC selection scored thirty or more points three times and twenty or more points sixteen times as he finished the season with a school-record 637 points, which he broke the next year.

Ann Shelton is considered by far one of the most dominating pitchers in Jacksonville State's softball history. Despite playing only two years, she holds the school's career strikeout record with 635 in only 418 innings in the circle.

As a senior, she set the single-season wins record by winning twenty-eight games and also set the single-season record for strikeouts with 335 while posting a microscopic 0.71 earned run average, also a school record and the fourth highest total in the nation. Her 10.3 strikeouts per seven innings ranked second nationally.

Shelton pitched the Gamecocks to a 46-11 mark, including a 13-3 Atlantic Sun Record, as Jacksonville State earned a berth in the NCAA Regionals in the school's first year in Division I. She was named the Atlantic Sun Player of the Year, first-team All-A-Sun, and the Most Valuable Player as the Gamecocks won the A-Sun Conference Tournament.

She also earned NCAA Academic All-America honors and Academic All-District accolades. As a junior in 1995, Shelton set the JSU single-season strikeout record with 300, which included a school-record 19 strikeouts in seven innings versus Piedmont College. She posted a 0.73 ERA after pitching the team to a 32-16 record in JSU's final season in Division II. Proving it wasn't all about defense, her .400 batting average was third-best on the team that season.

JSU ANNOUNCES SPORTS MANAGEMENT MASTER'S DEGREE

BY KRYSTIN MITCHELL

Jacksonville State University has exciting news for those students interested in a career in athletic administration. Dr. Glaucio Scremin, assistant professor in the Department of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation (HPER), is pleased to announce that a Master of Science in Sports Management is now available. The Graduate Council gave their approval on June 23, 2009, and now JSU is one of only two universities in Alabama, and the only regional university, to offer this program.

Dr. Glaucio Scremin was brought in to help design the sports management master's degree and has been at JSU for about a year. He specializes in sports management and sports marketing and, so far, is the only professor scheduled to teach the courses for the new major. In addition to teaching, Dr. Scremin will be working this summer to develop the website for the new program.

Two concentrations will eventually be available to students that pursue this degree. The first concentration, called interscholastic athletic administration, is for those students pursuing a career in high school sports departments. Class B teacher certification is a prerequisite for this course of study. Eventually, it may be a requirement that every athletic director in Alabama has the certification that this degree provides. The second concentration, called sports marketing and administration, is still in development and should be available by fall, 2010. According to Dr. Scremin, this course of study is designed for anyone who wants to be involved in the "business side" of athletics. There is no teacher certification or specific bachelor's degree necessary for this concentration, as it is aimed more toward those seeking a career in marketing or public relations rather than coaching. Students pursuing either course of study will be able to complete most, if not all, of their classes online.

For approximately two years, JSU has had a Master of Public Administration degree with a concentration in athletic administration (MPAAA). This degree, like the new master's degree, is available entirely online. With this course of study, students must take certain required courses and then are allowed to fill their remaining classes with electives, half from Public Administration and half from HPER. Dr. Scremin says that the goal of the MPAAA is to provide preparation for a position in a public organization, such as a city or community center that receives public funding, rather than one with a private organization. Though this degree will still exist when the sports marketing concentration is offered, it may eventually be adjusted to cater more toward those students interested in the field of Recreation. The first student to complete this program anticipates graduation in summer or fall of 2009.

The field of sports management has seen a huge increase in popularity since Ohio University first developed a program about forty years ago. Dr. Scremin is anticipating the major to be a very popular one at JSU. This Master of Science in Sports Management is an exciting new development for the region and one more way Jacksonville State University is helping you get where you are going.

FRAN BLANCHARD, 1980–1984 JSU GAMECOCK

FOOTBALL REUNION

Don't miss your chance to reunite with your Jax State friends this fall. On October 3, players, cheerleaders, coaches, and friends of the 1980-1984 Gamecock football teams, as well as Delta Zetas from that era, are all invited to return to their alma mater to share a picnic on the quad before watching JSU face off against Tennessee Martin.

Fran Blanchard, organizer of the event, says the response from his classmates has been incredible.

"I've been hearing from people I haven't talked to in 30 years," Blanchard says. "It's been amazing."

One of Blanchard's favorite new contacts is Bobby Lane, '89, a former kicker and then cheerleader for JSU. After graduating from JSU, Lane suffered a stroke – but according to Blanchard, he's refusing to let physical struggles prevent him from returning home to JSU. It's been 17 years since he has set foot on the university's campus.

Lane will take a Greyhound bus from his home in Santa Rosa, Fla. to Anniston, Ala., and he's excited about the opportunity to reunite with old friends.

"As long as I am alive, I will find a way to be there," Lane told Blanchard.

Questions? Contact Blanchard at fran@triplecdevelopment.com or (256)557-1905.

COACH DON SALLS

BY BETHANY HARBISON

Belongings thrown over his shoulder, he hoisted himself into the Alabama-bound bus. The University of Alabama had offered young Don Salls, a native of White Plains, New York, a full football scholarship. He peered out the bus's window as the miles melted away, dreaming of touchdowns and big wins.

Don Salls came to the state of Alabama in 1938 to play the sport he loved, but when he stepped off the bus into Tuscaloosa's steaming summer air, he knew he would not be staying long — or so he thought. Seventy three years later, 90 year-old Salls, a coach, professor, author, and entrepreneur, loves to look back on his vibrant Alabama life, 38 years of which he invested in Jacksonville State University.

Yet his start in the state was a rough one. The University of Alabama's football practice field was knotted with onion grass, and the stench of a nearby paper mill turned his stomach.

"Every time I saw a Greyhound bus or a New York license plate or heard a train whistle, I wanted to turn around and go home," Coach Salls says.

He pleaded with his parents to let him transfer schools and play football at an institution closer to home, but when he discovered that doing so would require him to sit out a year, sacrificing key playing time, he decided to stay.

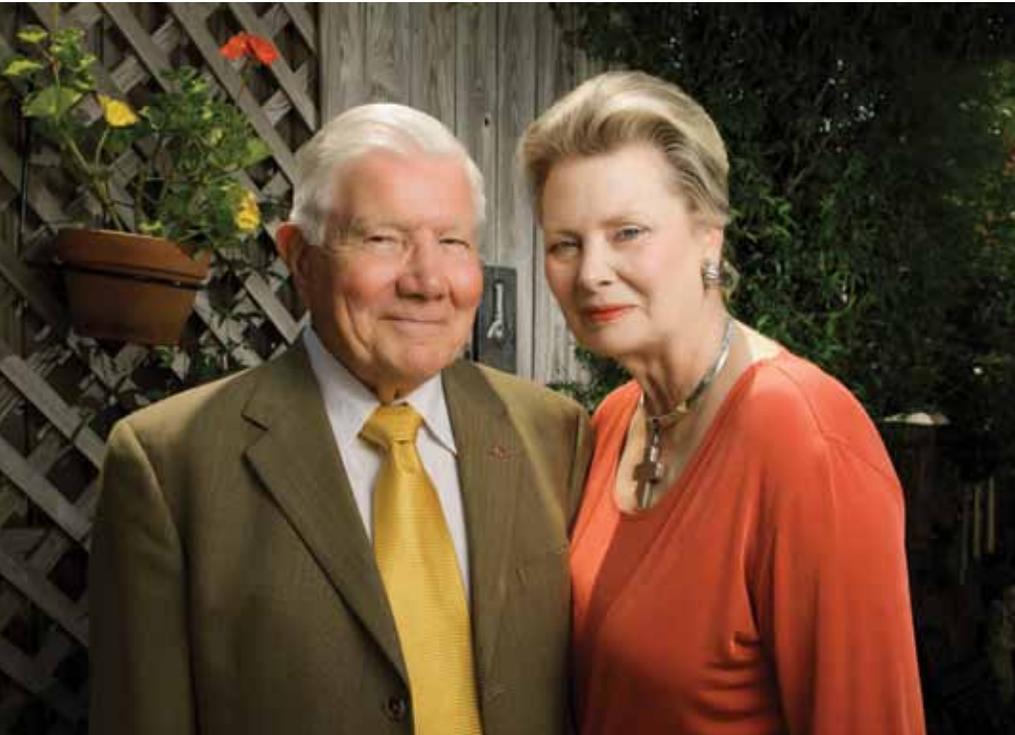

Salls was red-shirted his first year, but in his junior season, he intercepted a pass against the University of Kentucky and traveled 76 yards for the touchdown — a record-breaking run. In 1941, the 169-pound player made the university's first team at the fullback/linebacker position and helped the team go on to win a national championship that year.

Soon after earning his bachelor's degree in physical education from the University of Alabama in 1942, Salls was whisked away to World War II. There, his bravery earned him the Bronze Star Medal (Oak Leaf Cluster), American Campaign Medal, European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal (3 stars), WWII Victory Medal, Combat Infantry Badge, and an Honorable Service lapel button. After being shot in the hand during combat, Salls earned a Purple Heart as well. In 1945, he was promoted to Captain.

After the war, Salls returned to the University of Alabama and completed coursework for his master's degree in physical education, which he received in 1946.

Coach Salls with wife, Diane at their home in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Meanwhile, President Houston Cole, of Jacksonville State University, was on the hunt for a football coach. Salls' lack of coaching and teaching experience made him an unlikely candidate, but he came highly recommended. In 1946, a very surprised Salls was offered the position of head football coach and associate professor at JSU, on whose campus he had never set foot.

"All I had heard was that it was the friendliest campus in the South," Salls says.

When Salls began coaching, the school's football team played on the local high school's football field, which was full of gopher holes. Salls chuckles as he recalls a game against St. Bernard his first year, when the ball-carrying player of the opposing team tripped in one of the holes — 20 yards shy of the goal line.

"That's about all that field was good for," says Salls with a smile.

The young coach's first season was dismal, with the team winning just one game and tying another. Success was on its way for Salls, however. In 1947, Salls' second year as coach, he led his team through an undefeated season. Salls stayed on as head coach from 1946-1964, and in that time his teams won seven conference championships and were selected for four bowl games under his leadership.

As devoted as Salls was to leading teams to victory on the field, he was equally passionate about directing his students toward success in the classroom. For eight summers, he packed up his family and drove to New York to attend school at New York University to work on his doctorate. In 1955, he triumphed, becoming a Doctor of Education and was thus promoted to professor at JSU.

For many years, Salls worked as the university's supervisor of student teachers, a position that allowed him to observe budding teachers in the classroom.

"You could immediately tell if a student was from the Jax State program," Salls said. "The education program was — and is — excellent."

Salls became an entrepreneur in 1962 when he spearheaded a national program of isometric exercises. The XSIM, which stood for Ten Static Exercises in One Minute, was a program built upon the principle that it only takes six seconds to develop a muscle to its fullest potential. He ran advertisements in Life, Look, and The Reader's Digest as well as in the Sunday newspaper supplements, each inviting readers to send in money to receive the exercises.

The Monday after the first set of advertisements ran, Salls drove to check his post office box. Moments later, he found himself rolling out box after box of mail to his car. The postal clerk looked at him and, with eyes wide, she asked what was going on.

"I'm sorry, ma'am," a straight-faced Salls told her. "We were away for the weekend."

From then on, Salls and his wife Margaret employed twelve secretaries, who worked in his basement, opening envelopes and pulling out the money. The business' success allowed the family to build a home and send their four children to college.

“All I ever wanted to do was help people, and I believe these exercises accomplished that,” Salls says.

After the death of his first wife, Margaret, Salls married Diane in 1988. He credits Diane for many of the accolades that he has received in recent years because of her passion to see him honored for his life of good deeds, especially for his devotion to Jacksonville State University.

“I am so proud of my 38 years I spent there,” Salls says. “I worked with outstanding coaches, teachers, professors, students, and presidents. The Lord has truly blessed me.”

Coach Salls' Halls of Fame and Honors:

- JSU Athletic Hall of Fame
- The Alabama Sports Hall of Fame
- The Westchester County, NY Hall of Fame
- The Jonny Vaught Lifetime Achievement Award by the All American Football Foundation
- Paul Bear Bryant Alumni Athlete Award
- The Winningest Coach in the History of JSU Football
- JSU's Salls Hall was named for him in 1969
- Professor Emeritus of JSU

'60s Group

The JSU Alumni '60s Group held their annual Spring Fling in Panama City Beach, Florida. There was food, fun, and lots and lots of stories! The '60s Group will be holding their annual Homecoming gathering at McClellan on Friday, October 23. See page 41 for registration.

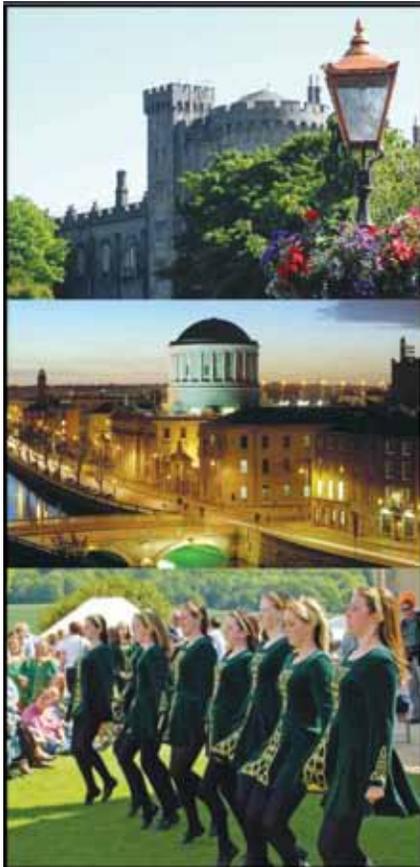

Florida Bound!

With the Jacksonville State University Gamecocks football team playing Florida State University in Tallahassee this September, the JSU Alumni Association will be providing several opportunities for alumni along the Gulf Coast to gather socially. Be sure to check the alumni web site at www.jsu.edu/alumni for upcoming events this fall in the Mobile area, Pensacola area, Destin/Fort Walton Beach area, and Tallahassee.

Chapter of the Year

The JSU National Alumni Association recognizes one outstanding alumni chapter each year. Last year's recipient was the Marshall County Alumni Chapter. Chapter president Katie Boggus (pictured here with JSU Alumni President Don Killingsworth) accepted the award on Homecoming Day. This year's recipient will be the Calhoun County Alumni Chapter. Congratulations and thank you for your outstanding work to help advance your alma mater.

THE VICTORIA WELCOMES YOU

BY BETHANY HARBISON PHOTOS BY STEVE LATHAM

Guests of the legendary Victoria of Anniston, Ala. have come to expect excellence — and rightly so. Steeped in history and laden with antiques, the bed and breakfast has been offering guests a taste of down-home, Southern hospitality and grace for more than twenty years.

In December of 2008, Earlon and Betty McWhorter generously placed the stately inn, which appraised for more than $3 million, in the care of the Jacksonville State University Foundation. This newly forged partnership between JSU and The Victoria benefits both institutions; The Victoria's historical integrity is maintained, and the JSU Foundation can use the property's net income to provide scholarships for JSU students.

The JSU Foundation soon hired Jackson Hospitality Services, a hotel development and management company based in Birmingham, Ala., to manage The Victoria, and James Rice was named general manager. With the continued additional advisement of JSU alumnus and highly regarded hotelier Jay Prater, The Victoria is in good hands.

Since acquiring The Victoria, the JSU Foundation has been working to spruce up the property to create an ultimate retreat for guests. New televisions, upgraded bedding, and manicured grounds are a few changes returning visitors may notice.

“The Victoria remains a unique choice in lodging accommodations,” Prater says. “For guests who are tired of the cookie-cutter approach of branded hotels, The Victoria offers a change of pace.”

The main house offers three unique rooms: The Kirby Suite, which features Victorian built-ins; The McKlelroy Suite, which includes a jetted claw-foot tub; and The Wilson Suite, which has a half-canopy bed and a glass-turreted sitting area. The McWhorter Guest House is a free-standing, one-bedroom cottage that features a sitting area, breakfast nook, separate bedroom and Jacuzzi bath. Even The Victoria’s fifty-six hotel rooms are special, with each featuring its own distinct furniture and décor.

Rice’s favorite moment from his time at The Victoria came recently, when a family rented the entire hotel for a wedding.

“The weather was great, and the food, which was set up with different selections in five locations, was wonderful,” Rice says.

“The lighting and table designs made for a beautiful Southern gathering.”

According to Prater, The Victoria’s business levels have continued to increase over the past few months – a fact he finds impressive, considering the current economic slowdown. He believes the inn will continue to be successful.

“[Jackson Hospitality Services] will be successful because they are going to place an emphasis on providing excellent accommodations at a fair price,” Prater says.

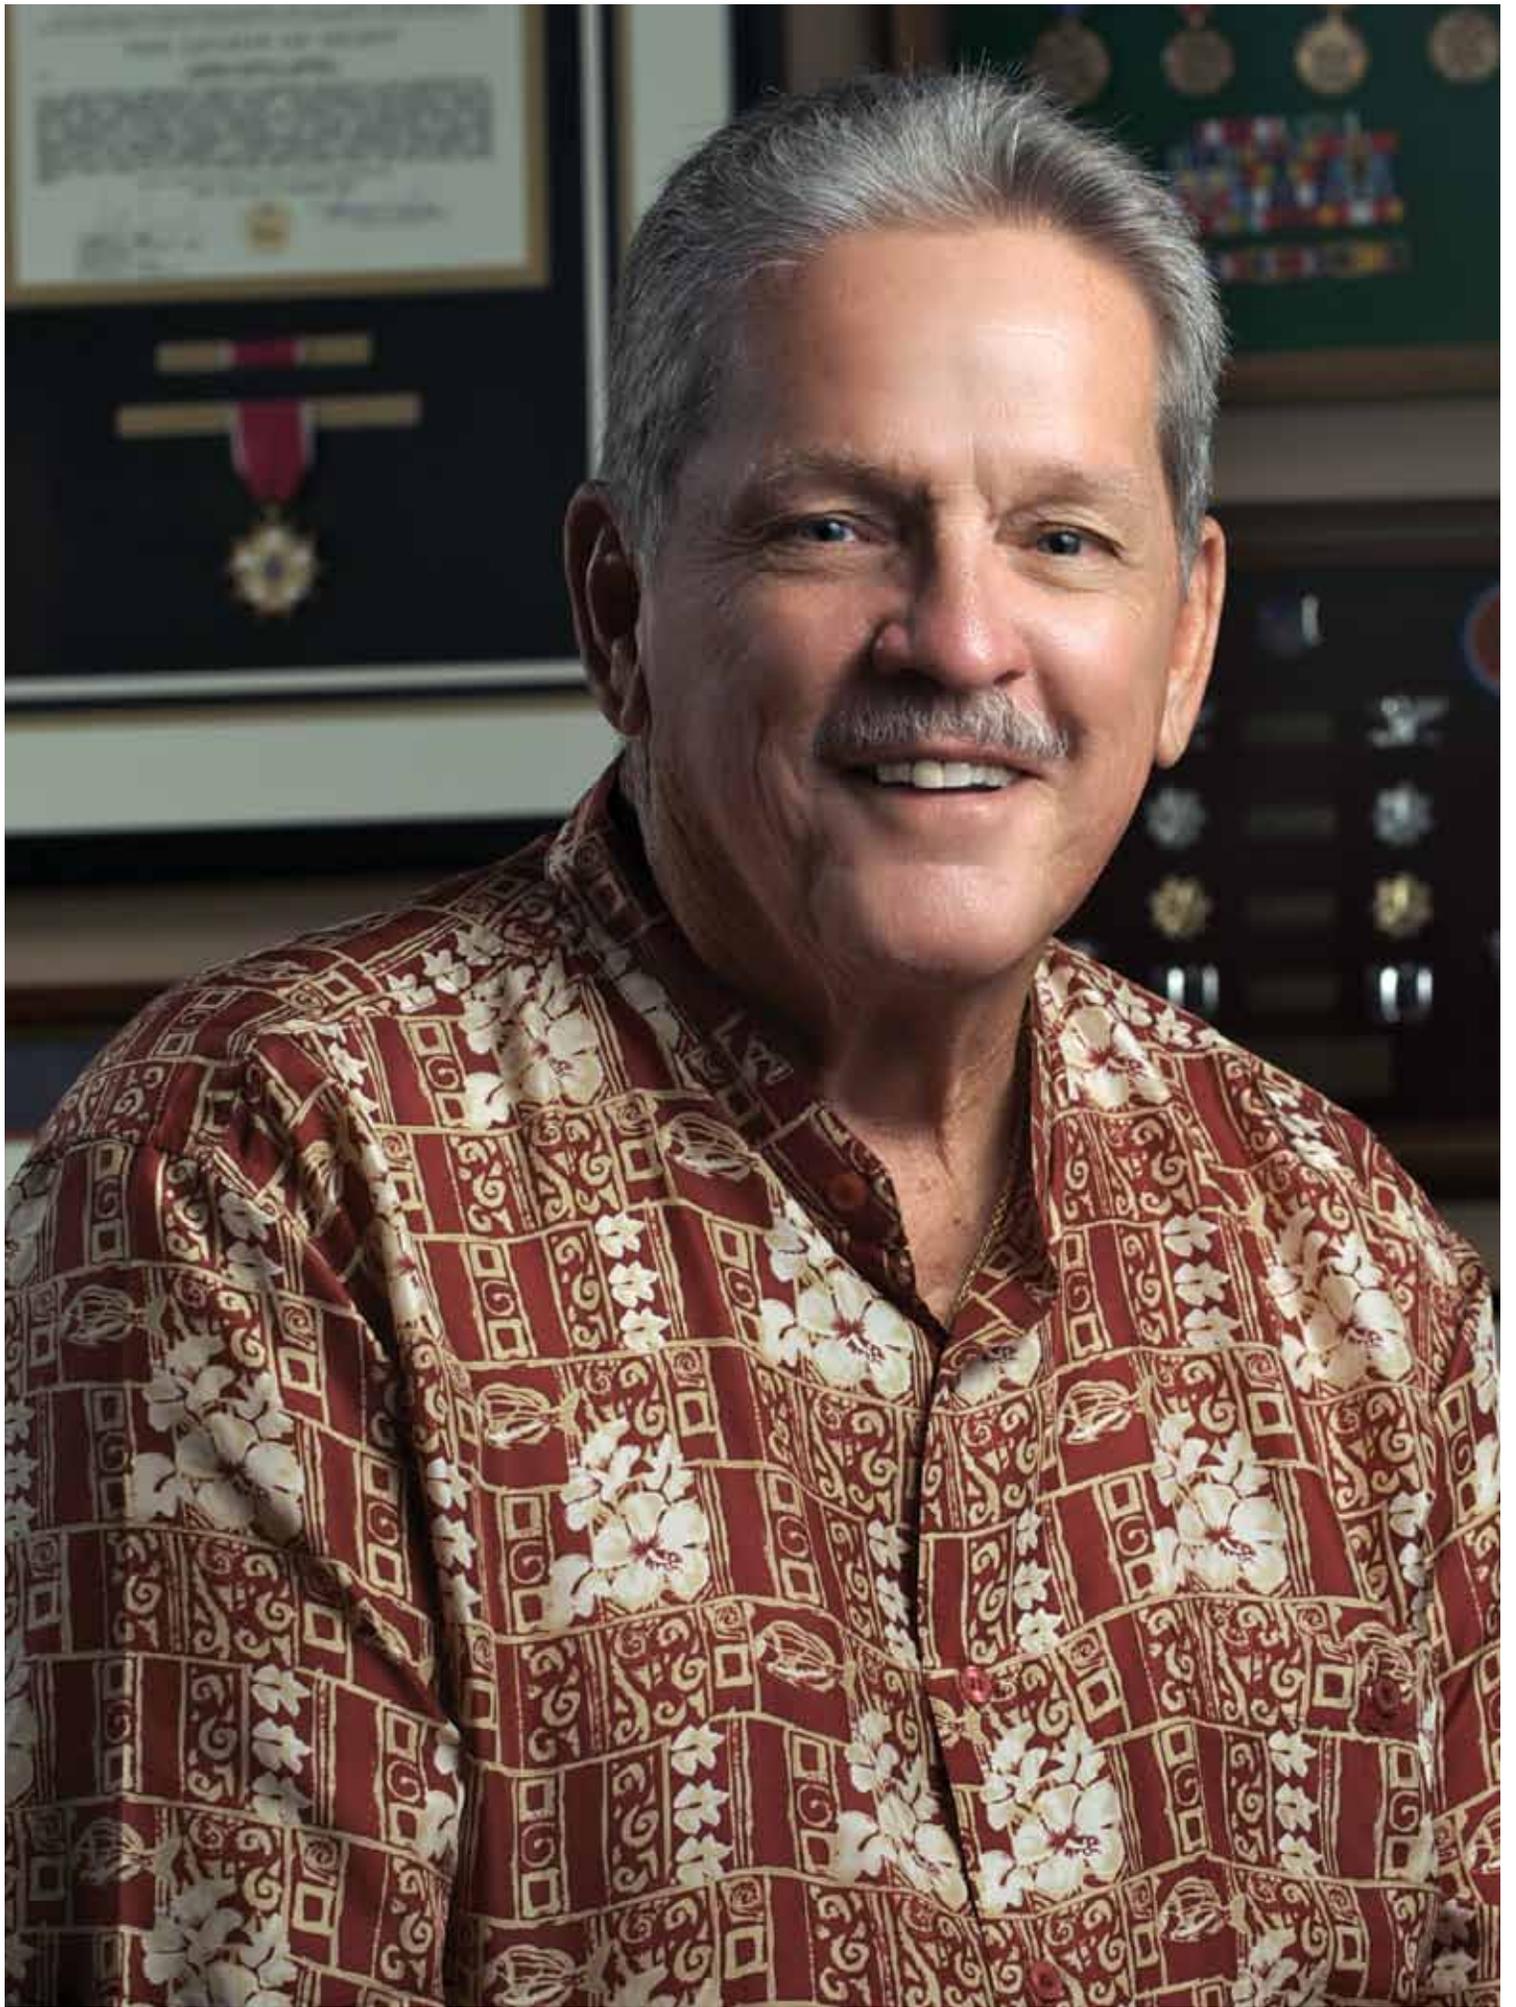

The Victoria’s success will translate into far more than just additional funds for JSU. In the near future, JSU students pursuing related careers will have the opportunity to work at The Victoria to earn school credit and learn real-world lessons. One program that will soon begin utilizing The Victoria’s potential as a learning lab is JSU’s Department of Family and Consumer Science’s new Hospitality and Culinary Management program of study.

“Dr. Debra Goodwin and Dr. Tim Roberts of the Department of Family and Consumer Sciences have developed a strong curriculum for the HCM program,” says Dr. John Hammett, dean of the College of Education and Professional Studies. “Their efforts, coupled with the vast array of benefits offered through an authentic learning laboratory setting such as The Victoria, will no doubt produce outstanding graduates from this program.”

BY BETHANY HARBISON

His name is trailed by a long line of letters, and his curriculum vitae is thick with accomplishments, yet Mike Kimberly, Dr, PhD, MPH, HCLD, says life is about more than accumulating degrees.

“Everything you accomplish is great,” says Kimberly. “But in the end, using that to help people is what matters.”

Since graduating from Jacksonville State University in 1964, with a double major in biology and chemistry, Kimberly has done just that. He has spent his life traveling the world offering his medical expertise to poor nations, shaping the minds of students at the University of North Carolina, commanding a MASH hospital during Desert Shield/Desert Storm, and working as the Director of Laboratory Services for Tennessee.

Kimberly has also been instrumental in organizing reunions for “The 60s Group,” a gathering of JSU alumni that meets yearly. The group has set sail on cruises and trekked to Nashville, Tenn., Calloway Gardens, Ga., Chattanooga, Tenn., and Panama City, Fla.

“We meet up and tell the same stories and the same lies,” Kimberly says with a laugh.

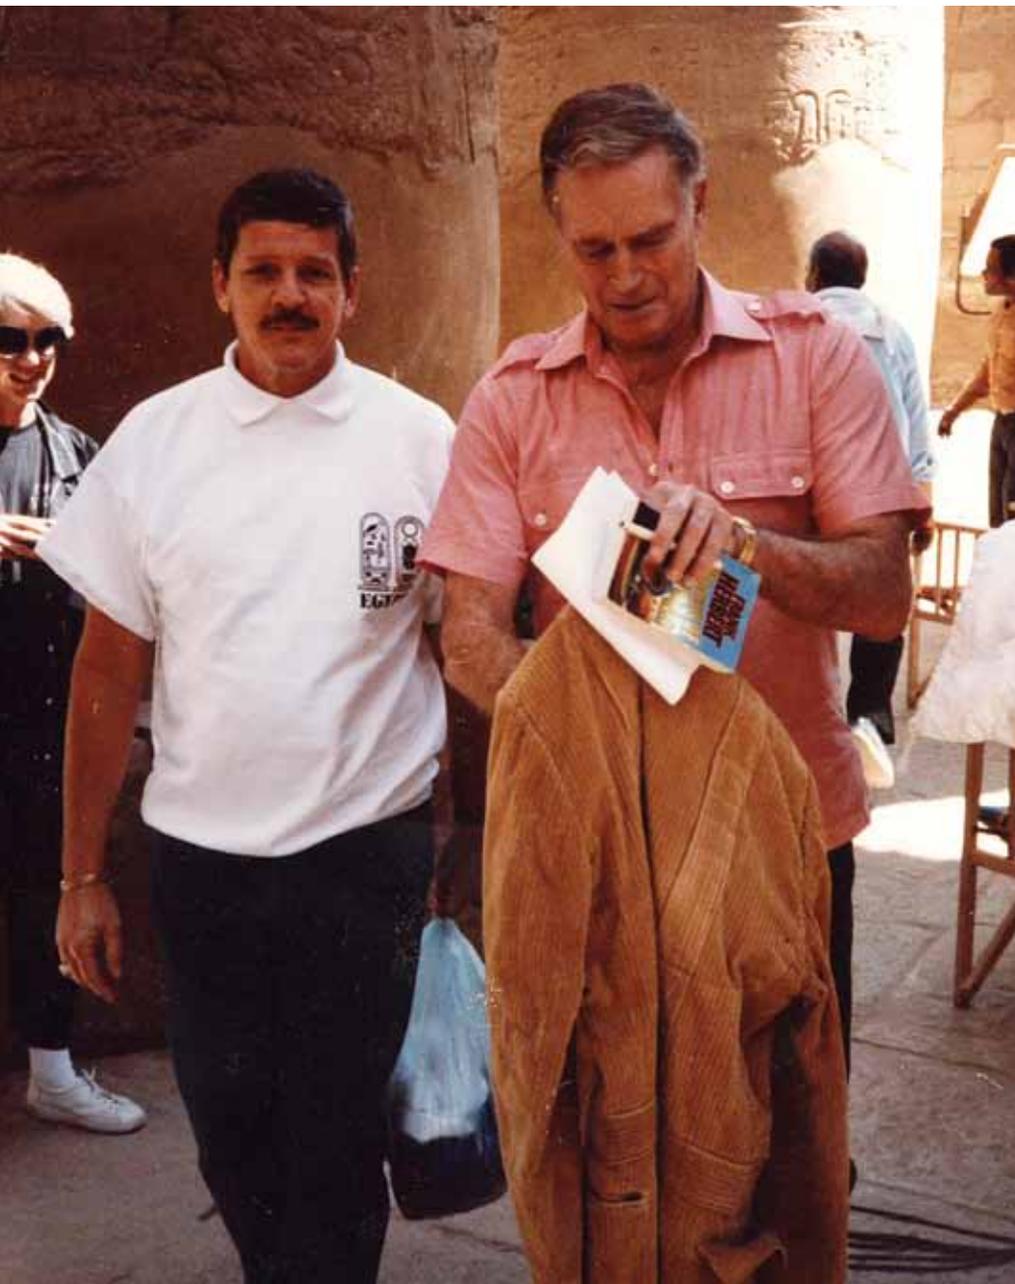

He is proud of the way the group of alumni and their spouses has united and become close-knit. Their purpose is more than just fun, though. They have also managed to raise $10,000 to give to the university who brought them together.

Kimberly fondly remembers being a young alum, still fresh from his time at JSU, and applying for a grant from UNC at Chapel Hill. He was one of just four recipients of the grant that year, and he went on to earn a master’s degree – and then a doctorate – in infectious diseases. He went on to teach courses for Florida Atlantic University, Palm Beach Junior College, Austin Peay State University, and UNC at Chapel Hill.

His proudest moments came when he was given opportunities to use his knowledge of infectious diseases and public health issues to make a difference worldwide. He has been to Zimbabwe, Africa, where he established health clinics, performed consultations, and helped the new clinics apply for money from the World Health Organization (WHO). “In Africa, the need is great,” he says.

He has also assisted on projects for Cote d’Ivoire, Sierra Leone, Nigeria, Tanzania, and other countries in Africa.

In 2001, Kimberly’s travels took him to Chennai, India on a trip sponsored by the WHO and the Center for Disease Control. There, he worked in a prenatal ward for HIV-infected babies.

“Seeing babies that are nothing but skin and bones affects you down deep,” Kimberly says. “Their world isn’t like ours.”

His trip to India brought laughs too. When sitting in the India Minister of Health’s office in New Delhi, Kimberly was caught off guard by a monkey that lunged in through an open window and landed in his lap.

In December of 2008, Kimberly traveled to Vietnam, a country he describes as having big crowds full of friendly people buzzing about on motor scooters.

“Once you try to cross the street, you better not stop,” he says.

While in Vietnam on the WHO-sponsored trip, Kimberly’s goal was to devise a strategic plan for developing a nationwide health system.

Kimberly and Brenda, his wife of 44 years, live in Anniston. They have one adult son and a new grandchild – who they love to spoil. 🍷
